

Lina D. Isorena is the Executive Director of the National Tax Research Center of the Philippines, responsible for the development and execution of plans, programs, and operating standards of the Center. She also renders technical assistance to members of Congress in the deliberation of tax proposals and other tax policy reforms. She is a member of various task forces on Philippine taxation.

She holds a Certificate in Public Finance from the University of Bath, England and a Certificate in Development Economics from the University of the Philippines. She has also authored and co-authored various publications on tax policies, tax planning, land taxation and tax enforcement.