

Richard Krever is a Professor at Monash University Department of Business Law and Taxation and Director of its Taxation Law and Policy Research Institute. Previous to this appointment, he taught at the Law Schools at Monash University and Deakin University and was a visiting professor at various universities. He has worked as visiting consultant at the International Monetary Fund. He is a member of different professional and learned societies and is deeply involved in academic research, doing editorial and supervisory responsibilities. He has authored and co-authored books on law and taxation and has contributed extensively to numerous academic journals.