

Richard Parry has been the Head for Cooperation with Non-OECD Economies, Center for Tax Policy and Administration, of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development since 2001, and is in charge of collaboration with approximately 90 non-OECD economies for closer integration through observership or possible accession and encouragement of the use of the OECD models and best practices in national tax policy and administration. Previously, he worked for the UK Inland Revenue where he worked on international tax issues. He specialized in controlled foreign company (CFC) and was responsible for reform of CFC legislation. He was a technical advisor on large transfer pricing mainly in the IT industry.