Description The Punjab Irrigated Agriculture Investment Program (PIAIP) will result in economic growth and improved sustainability of water and land resources. This will be achieved through improved management of Punjab's water resources and resulting increased productivity of irrigated agriculture. The outcomes from the Program and its investment projects include: (i) physical rehabilitation and upgrading (R&U) of irrigation infrastructure, (ii) improved practices and strengthened institutional frameworks for ground and surface water management, (iii) modernized irrigation management systems operation and procedures, (iv) reformed and restructured institutions for improved and sustainable irrigation service delivery, and (v) capacity development at all levels to support the management and institutional changes. The approach to implementation of projects supported under the PIAIP is based on comprehensive integration of components to achieve the aforementioned outcomes. This approach when combined with MFF modality will not only achieve success in a particular project, but facilitates sustained ADB engagement to have a transformative effective on the entire sector.

Project Rationale and Linkage to Country/Regional Strategy	tbd Strong engagement in the water sector in Pakistan is supported by (i) the ADB Pakistan country strategy and program, which identifies water as one of the key areas for economic development; (ii) ADB's Medium-Term Strategy II, which lists investment in water resources as a core ADB activity; and (iii) the national Government and the Government of Punjab, which both identify investment in irrigation and water management as a priority for Pakistan for economic development and poverty reduction
Impact	Increased agricultural productivity and farm income in Punjab irrigated agricultural areas
