Just transition, with its commitment to social and gender inclusion, is an opportunity to meet the goals of the Paris Agreement while also addressing the social, economic, and environmental needs and aspirations of Asia and the Pacific.

More than half of global greenhouse gases are currently emitted in Asia and the Pacific. There is an urgent need to rapidly transition towards net zero and climate-resilient economies and societies, requiring transformations that drive growth and sustainable development while delivering on social, economic, and environmental needs and ambitions.

Join us for a conversation on ADB’s Just Transition Support Platform, a multi-sector technical assistance platform to build the capacity of countries in Asia and the Pacific to plan, implement, and finance transition strategically.
